Organizational meeting for new council

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The new municipal councillors were sworn in last Tuesday, Oct. 29, at the organizational council meeting, and made a few small changes to how council meetings will be run.

Mayor Rick Mousseau was sworn into office first, with councillors Sheila Schulz, Gail Nowlan, Kim Moore, LaVar Adams and Garth Hollinger being sworn in afterward.

Coun. Joyce McCoy was sworn in on Friday, Oct. 25, and attended the entire meeting by phone because of a work-related conference she was attending.

At the organizational meeting, councillors discussed how and when they would hold their meetings and also decided which boards and societies they would sit on as council members.

Councillors decided to keep regular council meetings on the second Tuesday of each month, and also set when and how residents would be able to speak to council.

Mayor Rick Mousseau said council may decide to change the meeting schedules once it gets into the swing of things, but it will keep the previous council's schedule for now.

During both Committee of the Whole (COW) meetings and regular council meetings, residents will be able to speak to council without appointment for the first and last 15 minutes of each meeting – before the meetings commence and before council moves to go in camera, he noted.

The idea was brought up by Coun. Sheila Schulz as being a good way to hear from the public less formally than a delegation being organized.

Previously, COW meetings were the time when residents could come and talk to council as a whole, as there was a half-hour period available to the public prior to the meeting.

But, following discussion, councillors agreed that allowing for discussion during both COW meetings and regular council meetings would be beneficial.

Coun. Joyce McCoy was strongly in support of this idea, as it sends the message to residents that council is willing to hear their concerns, and that if nobody wants to speak to council on a particular night, they can move ahead with the meetings as planned.

Mousseau said during an interview on Friday that he was happy about how the first meeting went.

"It wasn't bad. I thought it'd be longer, but obviously (councillors are) reading the agenda package beforehand, which helps a lot," said Mousseau.

"It's quite a diverse group of people with different backgrounds and that'll help.

"We've got three incumbents – including me – and four new ones, which is good."

RCMP compile quarterly report

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

Overall crime in Didsbury is down when compared to the same quarter last year, according to the third quarter crime statistics recently compiled by RCMP, though some types of crimes were up.

Sgt. Jeff Jacobson said personal crimes such as threats, assaults and harassment are down when compared to this same time last year – from July to Oct. 1.

There were eight incidents of threats, harassment, assault and sex crimes this year, compared to 19 this same quarter last year, he said.

There was little change in the number of break and enters and theft over $5,000, with two incidents each quarter.

"We saw an increase in thefts under $5,000 which would typically be thefts from vehicles," said Jacobson, noting that there were 23 incidents this year, compared to 15 last year.

There were also 17 cases of mischief reported, compared to 10 last year.

"Provincial and other Criminal Code statistics showed significant decreases with fewer issues related to the Mental Health Act, breaches of the peace, and persons failing to appear in court," he added.

Reports of fraud, Liquor Act violations, disturbances of the peace and drug charges or warnings remained steady compared to last year, with nine, 10, 12 and six counts respectively this year.

Municipal bylaw violations reported also fell from 28 last year to 23 this year, with one charge being laid in each year.

Calls for service decreased overall, with 243 indices checks compared to 276 last year, 30 suspicious person or vehicle checks compared to 26 last year, and six missing person requests compared to 17 last year.

Police saw a decrease in false alarms, from 27 incidents to 19, he said.

"Provincial traffic offence reports have increased this quarter over the same quarter of 2012," said Jacobson.

"Much of these statistics relate to proactive traffic enforcement focused on our (Annual Performance Plan) priority of speed, intersections and seatbelts."

Collision reports were down, with nine being reported this year, compared to 14 last year, non-fatal-injury collisions down from three to one, and collisions with over $2,000 worth of damage down from nine to eight.

Mother and grandfather lost in crash

BY PAUL EVEREST
MVP Staff

A funeral was held in Olds last Saturday, Nov. 2, to remember a mother and a grandfather who died in a crash west of Three Hills on Oct. 27.

Tammy Moritz, 47, and her father Roy Stockwood, 76, were killed just before 10 a.m. when the pickup truck Tammy was driving east-bound on Highway 27 near Rge. Rd. 250 crossed into the westbound lane in poor weather conditions and struck an oilfield services truck.

Tammy and Stockwood were on their way to Drumheller to watch Tammy's twin sons, Brandon and Brody, play hockey.

Horses, hockey and her three sons were Tammy's passions in life, her friends said.

"Her first love was her boys," said Tracey Perkins, who knew Tammy for 25 years. "She was a great mother and a great friend. She was a lot of fun and had a zest for life."

Perkins, who also served on the Olds Grizzlies' board of directors with Tammy's eldest son Lyle, added that Buffalo Lake east of Red Deer was one of Tammy's most favourite spots on Earth and she loved spending the summers there with family and friends.

Supporting Lyle when he showed his horses was also extremely important to her, she said.

Tammy was involved with the Grizzlies several years ago, Perkins said, and the entire organization will miss her.

She added Tammy and Roy's family was still coping with the loss of Tammy's mother in September.

On her Facebook page, Tammy had posted that she was looking forward to a trip to Hawaii next month with her family.

"My Dad, brothers and myself are going on a little holiday," she wrote.

"One thing we can remove from my Dad's bucket list and we will all have fun doing it. Just booked a helicopter ride, submarine, fishing, Luau, Limo for a day and even going to visit Jurassic Park. The only other thing I could wish for is that Mom was here to go with us but she will be in spirit. Just another reminder don't put things off."

Kelly Stabdnaw, owner of Krude Boyz Oil Field Services where Tammy was employed, said Tammy was the person who could make anyone happy, even on the darkest day.

"She could always keep everybody smiling," he said. "Everybody that knew her knew she had a heart of gold."

"She will be dearly, dearly missed."

Stabdnaw, who knew Tammy for 16 years, said she was driving a company truck he had purchased for her in February at the time of the crash and police told him it had likely struck black ice.

He added that Nov. 1 would have been Tammy's one-year anniversary with the company and she was one of the hardest working persons he had ever known.

"She did everything but drive trucks. She did everything."

Perkins and Stabdnaw said they knew Roy but not well enough to share information about him with the Olds Albertan.

Police said they believe weather conditions were the cause of the crash as it was snowing at the time and no charges will be laid.

The occupants of the oilfield services truck were not injured in the crash.

Police investigate multiple thefts from vehicles

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

About a dozen vehicles were rummaged through between 9:30 on the evening of Oct. 27 and the following morning, according to police.

The vehicles were located in Southridge Crescent, 15th Avenue between the 1100 and 1300 blocks, the 1500 block of 20th and 21st avenues, and one vehicle was on the 900 block of 23rd Street, said Sgt. Jeff Jacobson.

Items stolen included a Nikon camera, purses, wallets, MP3 players, cash, sunglasses, a GPS unit and cigarettes, he said.

Although the matter is still under investigation, he is reminding the public to help prevent crimes of opportunity such as this.

"Remove valuables from vehicles, lock your doors, engage alarm systems, and be on the lookout for any suspicious activity around vehicles," said Jacobson, noting that in many cases like this, vehicles are left unlocked and are thus easy prey for thieves.

Another vehicle was rummaged through on West Heights Drive, between the evening of Oct. 23 and the following morning.

The owner didn't think anything was stolen, but noticed that it had indeed been gone through, added Jacobson.

Another vehicle theft occurred sometime overnight between Oct. 24 and the following day in Rosebud Estates.

The truck was rummaged through and items stolen included a laptop, two GoPro cameras, a dirt bike helmet and earbud headphones.

Police urge caution on area roads

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

With the recent snowfall during the past week, police received 20 reports of collisions, and although Sgt. Jeff Jacobson said they may not have all been in relation to the weather, he noted drivers should take heed of the impending winter.

One driver last week lost control in the slush on Highway 2A near Carstairs, causing a multiple-vehicle collision, he said.

Three people from that incident were transported to the Foothills Medical Centre in Calgary with injuries.

"We've had a vehicle in the ditch that slid off the road, had another vehicle that had hit a fence, and one was a backing incident on private property," said Jacobson.

There was also a five-vehicle collision in the parking lot of the Didsbury Hospital, he added.

There were four deer strikes reported to the police, as well as numerous other incidents including vehicles sliding off the road, sliding through stop signs, and colliding with either objects or vehicles after losing traction.

"And those are (only) the ones that were reported to us," he said, noting that officers did not attend every incident. Those listed were only the reportable collisions, and he said there may have been more incidents that were either not reported or were minor.

"Ultimately the good portion of those were weather-related," he said.

"It's a good reminder to the public to consider winter tires, and to recognize that the maximum speed limits posted are for ideal conditions and that people should drive appropriately for weather conditions."

Editorial Senior safety good for community

As the leaders who have built and supported communities in every province and territory for the past many decades, Canada's seniors are rightfully held in high regard by the community at large, including right here in West Central Alberta.

No question, Canada's seniors deserve in every way to be able to go about their day-to-day activities without fear and in safety and security.

National Seniors Safety Week is being held in Canada Nov. 6 - 12, a time set aside to promote the well-being of the nation's vital senior citizen community.

Unfortunately, while most seniors are able to live their lives in peace, about 10 per cent of elders experience some kind of abuse, according to the Canada Safety Council (CSC), an organization that promotes safety for all Canadians.

During National Seniors Safety Week 2013, the CSC is asking residents of all ages to help in the fight against senior abuse.

"As elders become less able to take care of themselves, it becomes more difficult for them to stand up for themselves, leaving openings for people to take advantage of them" the CSC says.

The council has identified four principle types of elder abuse. Knowing how to recognize those specific types of abuse is the first step in preventing them through proactive intervention.

- Physical abuse, where elders face the non-accidental use of force that injures or causes physical pain and may include striking, pushing, shaking, burning, shoving or harm created by over- or under-medication.
- Psychological abuse can include actions that decrease the person's sense of self-worth and dignity, and may include harassment, humiliation, intimidation, threats and insults.
- Financial abuse involves the unauthorized use of a senior's funds or property. It can include the misuse of funds or assets, cashing cheques without authorization, forging an elderly person's signature, and pressuring to change wills or sign legal documents.
- Neglect of elders can include failure to provide appropriate nourishment, shelter, clothing, medication and medical attention.

Knowing the signs of elder abuse is also key to intervention, signs that can include changes in personality or behaviour, fear, anxiety, depression, unexplained injuries, behaviour that mimics dementia such as rocking and mumbling, dehydration, poor hygiene and improper use of medication.

As with other types of crimes, those perpetrating elder abuse often make concerted efforts to hide their misconduct, creating another level of challenge for those striving to prevent and correct it.

As Canada recognizes National Senior Safety Week 2013, residents are encouraged to take an active role in the lives of Alberta's senior citizens, including helping to detect and prevent elder abuse.

JFK's assassination anniversary looming

PAT MURPHY

With the 50th anniversary of U.S. President John F. Kennedy's assassination looming, the media deluge is already underway. And as the fateful date of Nov. 22 approaches, be prepared for more.

It's really nothing to be surprised at. Indeed, the question of where were you when you heard the news has become a touchstone for people of a certain age.

As for myself, I was a second-year university student living at home with my parents in Ireland. And while it would be retrospectively respectable to say that we were traumatized by the news, such wasn't the case.

To be sure, we were shocked and saddened. But my parents still went out to their preplanned card game, and I went to the local cinema, which was something I always did on Friday nights. Life went on, as it usually does.

Still, there's no doubt about one thing. As the years have unfolded, Kennedy's murder has spawned its fair share of myths.

A particularly pervasive one has to do with blaming Dallas, the city in which he was shot. Popped into circulation within 24 hours of the assassination by the likes of James Reston of the New York Times, the story is that the city's climate of right-wing extremism was instrumental in facilitating Kennedy's murder. And it's a meme that persists to this day.

Now it's true that Kennedy was distinctly unpopular in right-wing Dallas circles. And his UN ambassador, Adlai Stevenson, had been heckled, jostled and spat upon by protesters from the right-wing National Indignation Committee. But unless you subscribe to the thesis that people inhale their motivations from the air, the case implicating Dallas is patently absurd.

After all, Kennedy's assassin wasn't a right-wing extremist. He was a communist.

And when it came to ideology, Lee Harvey Oswald was the real deal. Having defected to the Soviet Union in 1959, he subsequently lived there for almost three years, during which he wrote to his brother that "In the event of war, I would kill any American who put a uniform on in defense of the American government."

But the reality of life under the revolution wasn't entirely up to expectations, so Oswald returned to the United States in 1962. However, his disappointment didn't motivate him to change his ideological stripes. Instead, he developed an enthusiasm for Fidel Castro. And less than two months before the assassination, he was at the Cuban embassy in Mexico City trying to score a visa to travel to the island en route back to the Soviet Union.

Whatever ideological demons drove Oswald to shoot Kennedy, they clearly had nothing to do with right-wing extremism. To borrow a phrase from author James Piereson, those who argue otherwise "have reached an instinctive conclusion about the cause of the event without any reference to the actual identity of the assassin." Or put another way, they're just making it up.

Another popular notion is that Kennedy's death led to the Vietnam War. If he had lived, so the story goes, he would never have permitted the situation to escalate the way it did.

Of course, as with all historical might-have-beens, we'll never conclusively know how things would have developed. But we do know what actually happened while Kennedy was alive.

When he took office, Kennedy increased the American military presence in South Vietnam, and the first American military fatality there occurred less than a year into his presidency. By the time he died, 50 American soldiers had been killed. Further, he approved the coup that overthrew South Vietnam's President Diem - hardly the action of someone who was intent on disengagement.

When I wrote about this several months ago, an old friend chided me for being too hard on Kennedy. I had, he said, overlooked the fact that Kennedy inherited a situation where the domino theory and drawing the line in South Vietnam were already established tenets of American foreign policy. And that's true.

Still, all presidents and prime ministers inherit situations. It's what they do with them that defines the quality of their leadership.

John F. Kennedy was an attractive public figure who, had he lived, might have become a great president. His murder was both a crime and a tragedy. But fabricating mythologies around it doesn't do history any favours.

Troy Media columnist Pat Murphy worked in the Canadian financial services industry for over 30 years. Originally from Ireland, he has a degree in history and economics.

Scholarship helps cancer survivor in post-secondary

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

A former Didsbury resident, who is now attending Mount Royal University (MRU), got a big lift after he received the Childhood Cancer Survivor Scholarship from the Childhood Cancer Canada foundation, an organization geared towards improving the lives of children dealing with cancer.

In early August 2008, Cody Dolan, then 12, was diagnosed with osteosarcoma in his right knee.

After nine months of chemotherapy treatments, his body was able to eliminate the cancer, and Dolan continued on to complete grade school. He proceeded to MRU where he is now taking a one-year university entrance preparation program. He is hoping to start on his bachelor of nursing degree in the fall of 2014.

"And although I am not officially in the program as of this year, I am still taking courses that will apply to the program in the future," said Dolan.

The $1,500 scholarship has enabled him to save money as well as pay back some other student loans, he said.

"Overall, the money I received from this scholarship will go a long way in funding my educational career, now and in the future."

He was one of 150 in Alberta chosen for the award, and he said it's great to have received it.

"Although cancer puts a temporary hold on the things an individual is able to do, accomplish, and succeed in, it does not and has not prevented me – and others like me – from striving to pursue our goals regarding education," he noted.

"Ultimately, this scholarship allows individuals like myself to feel proud of our accomplishments and furthermore (show) that with the right set of perspectives and goals, anything is really possible."

When going through the treatments, Dolan and his family had to deal with many struggles, but that wasn't able to hold them down, he said.

"Although troubles did exist, the many inner characteristics such as strength, perseverance, and lots of humour ultimately allowed myself and others to break lose from the troubles and beat the cancer as a unified group... I could have never done it by myself."

Although the treatment carried through most of his Grade 8 year, he was able to return to school at the start of Grade 9 and succeed both educationally and socially, despite what he had gone through, he said.

The Survivor Scholarship is one of the many programs that Childhood Cancer Canada offers to children with cancer and their families, according to officials. The foundation also invests in collaborative, multi-centre, pan-Canadian childhood cancer research.

Forget Them Not. Remembrance Day 2013

2013 is the Year of the Korean War Veteran

"It is our duty today to pay tribute to more than 26,000 Canadian men and women in uniform who came to the aid of South Koreans during the Korean War, and in particular the 516 Canadians who gave their lives in service to defend the values of peace and freedom on the Korean peninsula," said Veterans Affairs Minister Steven Blaney.

Throughout the year, which also coincides with the 60th anniversary of the Korean War Armistice, Veterans Affairs Canada will have a number of initiatives and events that will educate Canadians and honour the legacy of Korean War Veterans.

These efforts will focus attention on a war that for too long has been referred to as the

"Forgotten War."

Those who served in Korea did so with courage and distinction, strengthening Canada's military legacy with victories in battles like Kapyong and Hill 355.

Sixty years later, the Republic of Korea has proven that Canada's service was not in vain - today it boasts a strong, lasting democracy, a vibrant culture and a thriving economy. All this is proof that Canadian Veterans made a real and enduring difference.

By marking 2013 as the Year of the Korean War Veteran, Veterans Affairs Canada will bring the accomplishments of this special group of Veterans to the forefront, and grant them the honour they so deserve.

Korean War veteran reflects on service

Korean War veteran Gilbert Allen plans to attend the annual Remembrance Day service with his son

BY BREANNE MASSEY
MVP Staff

Korean War veteran Gilbert Allen has had the memories of his peers trapped in the walls of his mind for nearly six decades.

The 79-year-old Nova Scotia native now resides in Innisfail and said it's impossible to avoid reflecting about the "wonderful" people he met in the Canadian Army when Remembrance Day draws closer every passing year.

"Remembrance Day makes me think about the people that I knew that were killed within a stone's throw of the Second World War," Allen explained. "It makes me think about guys, like when I was in Korea, that were killed by bad ammunition on the guns we were on. It makes me think of all the good people that served in the military.

"It's an honour thing. Remembrance Day is an honour thing, and I hope nobody ever forgets that."

Allen served in the Korean War, along with five of his siblings and several friends that enlisted, when he was a mere 18 years old. In spite of his decision to join the war as a teen, Allen added it was the "right" thing to do, and admitted he would do it again if he was given the choice.

"I left school in Grade 10 and I joined the Canadian Armed Forces because I wanted to go to Korea, and 20 of us left Yarmouth, Nova Scotia for Korea. Then we ended up going to basic training in (Manitoba) for basic training," he said. "You see, I was only 17 years old, so I couldn't go to Korea right away. This was the thing that I never even thought about until I first joined. They wouldn't even let me go until I was 18; even with special permission, I couldn't go until I was 18.

"I was in Canada for almost two years. I didn't get over to Korea until January of 1953. So, I was only in action from January until July."

But the memories of Allen's time in Korea have remained close to his heart for all of these years.

"All together, I spent 14 months in Korea, but I was there after," he said. There was a lot of clean-up — shells and mines.

"My whole family was always pretty involved with the military, so I always wanted to join up and do my thing. I was over there two years late."

He explained the honour of defending Canada remains inside

"...he's coming home from work, so it's probably the first time we'll get to go to a Remembrance Day service together."

of his heart and mind. It received public attention on July 27, he added, as many other war veterans marked the 60th anniversary of the ceasefire with memorial services.

It is now the Year of the Korean War Veteran, officially marked by the Canadian government to pay tribute to more than 26,000 soldiers who came to the aid of South Koreans during the Korean War, and especially to the 516 Canadians who were killed in the line of duty.

"He gets hyper at this time of year," his wife said with a chuckle.

Allen attended the annual veterans' supper at the Royal Canadian Legion Branch #104 on Nov. 1. Now, he is eager to attend the annual Remembrance Day service at the legion with his son for the first time on Nov. 11.

"He works in (Asia)," Allen said excitedly. "And he's coming home from work, so it's probably the first time we'll get to go to a Remembrance Day service together."

WE REMEMBER THEIR SACRIFICE

Remembrance Day

 Many people from across this great country, gave their lives during World War I and II and the Korean War. November 11 is a day to remember those brave and honourable men and women who fought for our freedom and sacrificed so much.

Remembrance Day is a day to reflect on the importance of such sacrifices. It is also a time to think of those currently undertaking peacekeeping missions all over the world.

On behalf of the Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills Constituency and my colleagues at the Alberta Legislature, I wish to salute all those that have risked and are currently risking their lives for our freedom.

Please take a moment to pause and remember all those who gave so much.

In times of scandal, look to real heroes

While Canadians coast to coast read and listen to the never-ending nonsense from Ottawa about the Senate expense scandals, and more recently, the tale of woe from Toronto about Mayor Rob Ford's alleged crack cocaine escapades, we can take solace knowing we are entering a week of heroes.

Sure, the shenanigans of Ford, Pamela Wallin, Patrick Brazeau and Mike Duffy make great copy and headlines, but compared to everything that Remembrance Day stands for their stories are at the very bottom of the pecking order of what is really important. Last weekend, hours before the season's first big snowstorm hit, I took a small road trip south-east of Innisfail to look at a once abandoned gravesite, one that had been largely forgotten for nine decades.

This tranquil spot, in a small forest overlooking a creek valley, is the final resting place of Lance-Cpl. Edgar Medley. Once a prominent citizen who was a vice-president of the Innisfail Agriculture Society, Medley joined the Canadian Expeditionary Force's 31st Battalion in the

BACHUSKY

First World War. He was a decorated soldier and badly wounded in combat while serving with the army in France. Medley came home but died from his wounds on May 27, 1918. He left behind his wife Maude and daughters Catherine and Eileen.

His gravesite, the only one at the isolated location, is commemorated with a huge ornate headstone. Maude died in 1970 and her ashes were spread at the site. The property, meanwhile, changed hands many times. It is possible some of the owners over the years never knew about the gravesite. Certainly, the Canadian government did not know, nor did the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, an organization created by Royal Charter after the First World War to ensure worthy veterans were and still are properly commemorated.

But three years ago both organizations received a tip about Lance-Cpl. Medley and his gravesite. He has since been properly commemorated as a war casualty in the Canadian Book of Remembrance and the Canadian Virtual War Museum. He is the last Alberta soldier from the First World War to receive this honour. He is certainly a true hero.

But there is more. Last Friday I had the honour of attending the seventh annual Royal Canadian Legion Innisfail Branch 104 Veterans Supper. It began with a moving performance by the Innisfail Legion Pipe Band, and was followed by an awards presentation to four deserving young men from Penhold Air Cadet Squadron #7.

It was made possible by Korean War vet Doug Whorrall and his lovely wife Joyce. Four years ago the couple created a bursary for worthy cadets. Each year they give away $3,000 to young men and women who prove themselves to be the best of the best in the cadet corps.

Doug, who served in the Royal Canadian Signal Corps in Korea in 1951 and 1952, was a hero then, and 60 years later he is still a hero to many, many people for his ongoing commitment to the legion, the third-largest in Canada in terms of its membership numbers, and today's youth.

When Nov. 11 rolls around I will think of my grandfather – a First World War vet, and my father who served in the Second World War.

But I am also going to reserve a few thoughts for Lance-Cpl. Edgar Medley and Doug Whorrall. They don't get headlines like Ford, Wallin, Brazeau and Duffy but they should, and much more. They have made this year's Remembrance Day extra special.

Johnnie Bachusky/MVP Staff

HONOURED - About 20 kilometres southeast of Innisfail, far away from highways and country roads, there is the solitary gravesite of First World War hero Lance-Cpl. Edgar Medley, who was wounded overseas and died in 1918 when he returned to Canada. His burial site was unknown to Veteran Affairs Canada and the Commonwealth War Graves Commission (CWGC), for more than 90 years. Last year Lance-Cpl. Medley was finally recognized as a war casualty and he's now officially commemorated in the Canadian Book of Remembrance as well as the Canadian Virtual War Memorial.

Taking pride in our Canadian Forces

It's not the equipment they have or even their numbers -- it's the spirit of freedom they fight so hard to promote

At times, I've found it hard to feel pride in the Canadian Forces.

The budgets have been slowly tapering over the years and the equipment is getting older as time passes.

But even though we may not have the top-of-the-line aircraft or the best equipment, our forces have accomplished great things.

KEVIN

For example, our forces took on one of the most violent provinces in Afghanistan and suffered fewer losses than any other ally in that campaign.

One of the reasons for this is when the Canadians march in, many of the insurgents would see the red maple leaves embroidered into the uniforms and flee, simply because of the reputation of our fighting men and women.

So seldom do we remember the epic battles fought by our troops, despite the obstacles, from Vimy Ridge to Dieppe.

One other such battle happened during the Korean War in the early 1950s.

Following the Second World War, communism and democracy were at odds. The common threat of the Germans now gone, the Russians and Chinese were alone in a world that viewed their system as flawed.

North Korea had embraced the communist ideals, and the South Koreans wanted democracy.

The war started as a battle between the two sides of Korea, but soon after conflict began, the United Nations issued a call to action, with Canada and 20 other nations, including the United States, joining in the fight for democracy.

The Chinese pledged their help to their fellow Communists, thus starting a proxy war between the forces of democracy and communism.

Then-president Harry Truman said at the time he was afraid the communist ideals, like the Nazi regime, would slowly spread across the continent if allowed to continue unabated, an attitude reflected by many of America's allies.

Thus, in mid-February, 1951, the 2nd Battalion of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry (PPCLI) joined in the fight under the command of the 27th British Commonwealth Infantry (BCI), which was engaged in pushing the North Koreans back to the 38th parallel - the line between North and South Korea.

Although it appeared the Communists were losing, in April that year, the Chinese and North Koreans regrouped for a massive counterattack.

In an attempt to quell the resurgence, Canadian,

British and Australian troops were ordered to set up defensive positions in Kapyong Valley, which was surrounded by hills and three kilometres wide at its widest point.

If they lost the positions at Kapyong, the South Korean capital of Seoul would be severely threatened. Each of the three regiments stationed itself on its own hill, with Americans and New Zealanders joining the British regiment.

During the night of April 23, the Australians came under heavy attack, being forced to retreat the following day.

That night, the Red armies took advantage of the position allowed them by the retreat, and attacked with full force against the Canadians, whose flanks had been exposed.

Due to the distance between the Canadians and their allies on the other hill, they could request no help other than artillery strikes.

About 5,000 Red soldiers marched on the PPCLI, which only numbered around 700 men, and due to low numbers of supplies, the battle ended up being a long one, fought mostly hand-to-hand.

At one point, the Canadians called artillery strikes on their own position, taking cover while the shells came in.

Battling all through the night, the PPCLI fought long and hard, sustaining 10 casualties and 23 men being wounded in action.

Despite the gruelling battle, the Canadians were able to push back the Red tide, with the Chinese sustaining over 1,000 casualties, not including those wounded.

Because of battles like Kapyong, Canadians have made a reputation for themselves as being among the most skilled armies in the world.

They have also garnered the love and respect of nations like South Korea, which have benefited from their intervention.

So yeah, we may not have the best equipment, but I'm still pretty darn proud of what our men and women in arms have accomplished, and how they have changed the world for the better because of their sacrifices.

Off-leash park now ready for public use

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The staff at the Didsbury Veterinary Clinic have decided to turn the eastern section of their property into an off-leash park recently, and although there is still some minor work to be done, Dr. Andy Mencarelli says the park is ready to use now.

The park is beside the walking paths on the northeast side of town, along Highway 582, and is enclosed by a chain-link fence with a gravel walking surface.

The idea stemmed from off-leash parks that Mencarelli saw while attending school in Vancouver, he said.

"There are two kinds of off-leash parks: ones like the Bow River in Calgary, where dogs and their owners can roam for miles, and there are smaller ones that are seen more often in urban settings, where although the area is small compared to large parks, the areas are large enough for dogs to chase a ball or each other," said Mencarelli.

It is free for the public to use now, and can be accessed from the asphalt walking paths through a chain-link gate.

Since the enclosure is right on the walking paths, it will be a perfect addition to the public park, which is currently an on-leash only area, he noted.

Though there is a round pen that the clinic keeps horses in, he said they only use the enclosure for six or seven days a year, so staff thought they could make better use of the area.

"This is a part of our lot that is really underutilized...we are still going to use it for horses, and we will lock it if there are horses in here because that's unsafe, but we hardly ever do."

He noted there is still some work to do on the fenceline, as there are gaps between the ground and chain links in a few spots. But unless the dogs in the area are escape artists, they will have a 100-foot by 175-foot enclosure to stretch their legs.

"As long as the dog's friendly and people are cleaning up after them, it'll be a big asset," he said.

"There's no membership, there's nothing, this is just something we want to do for the town - it's not a money-making venture in any way."

They have a few improvement plans besides levelling the fenceline, including putting in a street light to brighten up the area at night and the addition of a bench or two, he added.

They will be asking town council to consider sponsoring the improvements, as the site will be available to the public for free, but if that fails, he said they will ask for community sponsorship.

"It's our non-profit contribution to the town, which is essential. Dogs love to play with one another and it's a unique opportunity. You must be careful, but if they're friendly, which most dogs are, it can be a lot of fun."

It is on private property, and though he is having issues obtaining liability insurance, he said as long as owners accept the risks of using the area, they can.

"We're still in favour of the idea, people can use it as of now, really, we'll just get some signs to make sure that everybody's safe."

MORITZ, Tammy Louise

It is with heavy hearts that we announce the passing of Tammy Louise Moritz beloved mother, sister, aunt, and friend. She was taken suddenly from us on October 27th at the young age of 47. Tammy was born May 14, 1966 in Calgary to proud parents Roy and Hazel and older brother Don. The family moved to a farm east of Didsbury where Tammy became an older sister to brother Shane. Here she pursued her love of horses. At Didsbury High Tammy participated in many sports and was recognized as Athlete of the Year. She married Terry Peterman in 1984 and in 1990, Tammy and Terry welcomed a son, Lyle, into their lives. At this time she worked for UFA and in 1989 she became a School Trustee. That experience offered the opportunity to enter the car business and she spent several successful years as manager at Gary Moe Mazda. In 2000, Tammy married Ron Moritz and in 2001, Tammy and Ron welcomed twin boys, Brandon and Brody into the family. With the chance to spend more time with her boys Tammy took a job as manager for the Olds Grizzlies and just recently expanded her talents into the oilfield business. Tammy had a passion for horses, The Calgary Flames and Stampede, all other sports and spending time with family and friends. Tammy was the number one fan of her sons supporting Lyle in his pursuit of riding and Brandon and Brody with their hockey. The one trait that Tammy was well known for was having strong opinions and the confidence to express them. Tammy was a great hostess and was known for her expert entertaining of family and friends. She loved Christmas and everyone who visited her during this season would be impressed with the detailed decorating of her home. Tammy was a friend who was fiercely loyal to all the people in her life for whom she cared. True, generous and loyal in all she did. Tammy had ambitions and plans for the future for herself and her boys and she has been taken much too soon. She will be forever remembered by her sons, Lyle, Brandon and Brody; her brother Don(Kari) and their children Samantha, Karlee, and Sydney; and brother Shane (Jody) and their children Brett, Kelly, Kendal, and Cori and her second family the Worsfold's. Tammy will also remain in the hearts of all her family and friends. A Celebration of her Life was held on November 2, 2013 at the First Baptist Church, Olds with Harold Hunter officiating. In lieu of flowers, memorial tributes may be made directly to the Alberta Children's Hospital or to S.T.A.R.S. Air Ambulance.
